

This morning Mark Evanier showcases an incredible piece of comic-book history: home-movie footage from Superman Day at the 1939-40 New York World's Fair (the same exposition that introduced the Trylon and Perisphere, which in '80s DC Comics served as the headquarters of the All-Star Squadron). It's notable certainly for the glimpses of such figures identified [...]

Read more: <http://robot6.comicbookresources.com/2013/09/blast-from-the-past-superman-day-at-1939-new-york-worlds-fair/>