

When it was founded in 1984, San Francisco's Cartoon Art Museum was a "museum without walls," with no permanent exhibit space. It moved to several locations before settling into its current space on Mission Street in 2001. And now it will move again, but no one is sure where. The museum revealed Thursday that it [...]

Read more: <http://robot6.comicbookresources.com/2015/04/cartoon-art-museum-is-moving-destination-unknown/>