

This morning at 8 a.m. Pacific Comic-Con International tested their new system for selling tickets to the 2011 show. As we noted earlier this week, it involved using two vendors and making 1,000 tickets available during the test. The test is now closed, according to their website, which now reads, "The test is now completed [...]"

Read more: <http://robot6.comicbookresources.com/2010/12/ci-tests-new-ticket-system-burned-through-1000-tickets-in-about-60-seconds/>