

While minicomics are a fixture of conventions, and increasingly the Eisner Awards, it seems doubtful we'll encounter microcomics in artists alley anytime soon. Still, cartoonist Claudia Puhlfürst's "Juana Knits the Planet" is leading the charge. The 12-panel comic strip has been etched onto a single human hair using a focused ion beam, "a very [...]"

Read more: <http://robot6.comicbookresources.com/2014/05/worlds-smallest-comic-is-etched-onto-a-human-hair/>