

We are headed back to the world of Batman in the latest installment of "Baddies That Need Movie Love" and I'm highlighting a character- or two, that at first glance may have you questioning my sanity. But that's not unusual for a comic book fan right? RIGHT?! Last summer, when Christopher Nolan and Warner Brothers finally made a third Batman film official, the speculations began as to who would be taking on the Batman. Many hoped he would be facing a more physical threat, compared to the intellectual baddies he'd faced in the previous two films and fans were rewarded with Bane as that threat. But amid the myriad foes that Batman has faced over the years, and the many baddies that were suggested for the part, there was one villain (actually two, but I've already done an article on Solomon Grundy) who stood out to me: Ventriloquist and Scarface. As always, before

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/geekboymovienews/news/?a=36238&t=Baddies_That_Need_Movie_Love_Ventriloquist_Scarface