

Bradley Cooper's Limitless may be a worldwide box office hit but the Hangover 2 star couldn't manage to wrangle the lead of The Green Lantern from Ryan Reynolds during auditions. "Ryan and I got to know each other through testing for Green Lantern," Cooper told TF exclusively. "They tried to separate everybody [who was auditioning]. They would usher you in one room and the other guy out the other room..." "I was like, 'is this nuts?' I didn't allow that to happen. We were emailing each other. I know his wife very well from He's Just Not That Into You. I love him. So now we're always looking to do something together." The new bromance will hopefully get its onscreen outing in an untitled police 'four-hander' set in San Francisco. In the meantime, Cooper got a first look at Reynolds in action. "He's put [the outfit] on for me a lot," he joked. "It's great."

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/legendsareborn/news/?a=34282&t=Bradley_Cooper_on_Ryan_Reynolds_and_GL_Auditions