Hans Zimmer, composer for the critically acclaimed film scores for Chris Nolan's Batman Begins & The Dark Knight along with James Newton Howard, recently chatted with MTV at the Critics' Choice Movie Awards. What he discussed, briefly of course was his third collaboration with Nolan on the highly-anticipated The Dark Knight Rises film. "Sure, but the thing about Chris and myself is, of course what we try to do is we treat each one with the economy it deserves," he explained. "I try to invent and reinvent and not just go over old ground. I think that's the thing that was so exciting for people on 'The Dark Knight.' They knew we were doing a 'Batman' movie, but they had no idea it was going to be that sort of a 'Batman' movie." With shooting expected to commence May 6 - November 28 in new locations, as well ones used in the previous
