

Tonight at the Hero Complex Film Festival people in attendance were treated to a brand new trailer for Joe Johnston's Captain America: The First Avenger, and while unfortunately it hasn't made it's way online for us to view and it's looking like it wont be for another week, the folks over at Newsarama were lucky enough to be there to see the new trailer and have posted this description of the footage they were shown. It's a much more linear trailer than past Cap footage, starting off with a skinny Steve Rogers in a car with Peggy Carter (Hayley Atwell), interspersed with footage of him courageously getting beaten up by neighborhood toughs in an alley. The military scenes show him herorically jumping on an (inactive) grenade during a drill, with Colonel Chester Phillips — played by Tommy Lee Jones — remarking "He's still skinny." Things move to Steve undergoing the Super-Soldier treatment, with
