

There have been great expectations when it comes to Marvel's much anticipated release, "Thor" and, having seen the film for myself at the world premiere, I can certainly say to the fans that it will more than exceed these expectations. This film is totally different to anything Marvel has released before. It is a true epic. At times it feels like it is two films in one; a film of the superhero genre depicting a superhuman character among mortal men, and a fantasy/adventure film set in the spectacularly created realm of Asgard. Visually, it is a sight to behold. The special effects are beyond fantastic. The effects of Asgard, of Jotunheim, are on a huge scale, and the colours used give this movie a very unique aesthetic. The score is absolutely exquisite. It's funny because I've never been too impressed by Patrick Doyle's scores in the past. In comparison to John
