

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=28543&t=James_McAvoy_Elaborates_On_iX-Men_First_Classi_Role_Rushed_Production

Now chatting in-depth with Collider, Scottish actor James McAvoy now discusses his 'Charles Xavier' role in X-Men: First Class, elaborating the overall "rushed" experience, parts he favored, as well those he thought was tough playing such an iconic character. Also sharing how he thinks it'll turn out with Matthew Vaughn's (Kick-Ass) directorship, read on below. What is it like to do X-Men: First Class and have such a quick turn-around, since the film is due out on June 3rd? "I don't think I've ever made such a big movie, in such a short period of time. It's nuts, really. But, we're getting it done. No movie has ever got enough time. It doesn't matter how much money you've got, and it doesn't matter how much money you've not got. You never finish on time. You're always up against it and you're always working up until the end. To get three days off the