

Says the article, "Robinov, who shuttered Warner's specialty movie labels in 2008 and infamously passed on releasing the Oscar-winning hit Slumdog Millionaire, wants to keep increasing the number of big-budget 'tentpoles' that fuel global revenue. His most immediate hurdle is filling the void that will be left this summer when the multibillion-dollar Harry Potter series shepherded by [Alan] Horn ends. Robinov is betting on DC Comics characters to take center stage starting in June with the $200 million-plus production Green Lantern. HE'S THEN AIING TO RELEASE NEW BATMAN AND SUPERMAN FILMS IN 2012 AND JUSTICE LEAGUE, A TEAMING OF DC'S TOP HEROES, IN 2013." What do you think? Is this even a possibility? Just as importantly, do you WANT to see a Justice League movie? For much more on Robinov, follow the link.

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/VoicesFromKrypton/news/?a=34025&t=Justice_League_Movie_Planned_For_2013