

Over a year ago, a huge rumor surfaced suggesting that Marvel Studios was "meeting with writers and directors to work on small scale films based on some of their unknown characters." While the studios' president debunked the rumor, he did however reveal his interest in the idea. And now the rumor has resurfaced, via Film School Rejects, not only suggesting the studio made it more than just an "idea," but they've already filmed two. Read the source's report below, verbatim. Marvel Studios may be getting into the short film business to help boost their already bustling feature film trade. According to a source close to Marvel Studios, the company is setting some of their staff writers to developing smaller characters in the Marvel universe for future projects. These projects, only proposed as short films at this point, could lead to certain ancillary characters making appearances in future features or even becoming popular

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=40675&:t=Marvel Studios Moving Forward With Short Films Agent Coulson To Star In First Two