According to Brendon Connelly of Bleeding Cool, a new video game spin-off to Steven Spielberg's original Jurassic Park movie is in the works. Telltale Games, who also created the Back to the Future game serial is working on the game for Mac & PC, which the first details are revealed below. Connelly says, "Firstly, it's a surprise that the game is not a point-and-click adventure like the rest of Telltale's output. The game has an action engine, which seems apt for this particular license, with all of the running and hiding and chasing. They promise that they'll capitalise on both slower and more action-packed possibilities. "Worryingly, though, the article seems to suggest that the action sequences will be realised as Quick Time Events. Oops. I hope they can make it work well, because QTE games normally leave me very, very cold." The game won't feature the movie's main characters. Though they do exist
