On The Premise Of Torchwood: Miracle Day: " The premise is that a miracle happens to the world. It's as simple as, one day on Earth, no one dies. Not a single person on Earth dies. The next day, no one dies. And the next day, no one dies. And on and on and on. By the sixth day, the old stay old and keep getting older, and the dying keep dying, but no one quite dies. The possibility of death ceases to exist. That's great news for some people, but globally it becomes a problem. That's what the whole show is about. It's an instant overnight population boom where, suddenly, the Earth relies on people dying. That's how the whole system works. So, suddenly, you've got a crisis affecting everyone on the planet. That's where the Torchwood team and our brand-new characters come in." On Whether The Death Of So Many Major
