Apparently, there is "talk" of the much-anticipated Captain America: The First Avenger inside the latest issue of SFX Magazine, courtesy of SuperHeroHype forums. Although, more excitingly, there is a new image consisting of Johann Schmidt, (Hugo Weaving) the Red Skull holding the Tesseract; known well as the cosmic cube. For those who don't already know, the device Schmidt is wielding here, is one of the known elements in the film that connects with Marvel's much-anticipated THOR adaptation. On it's capabilities via Wiki, an otherwise semi-transparent cube, the Cosmic Cube glows from the energy captured within it. Tapping into the power of the Cube, its user can literally reshape reality to his whim. In fact, the Cube incubates an energy being — an entity of great power from the dimension of the Beyonders. The entity is capable of self-evolving intelligence and, when fully emerged from the Cube, bases its appearance on
