

The good folks over at Comic Book Resources are now unveiling segments from their 'September' visit to the set of Marvel's much-anticipated Captain America: The First Avenger film. Chatting in-depth with 'Bucky' actor Sebastian Stan, right after he filmed an "emotional" scene, in which he gets separated from his partner, Steve Rogers, check out an excerpt below.

We just watched you film a rather emotional scene. You were inside a large warehouse that was on fire, standing on the top of a catwalk and screaming to Steve Rogers -- you were clearly in some distress! Was this the most emotional scene to film thus far? I would say the scene at the end [of the film]. [Laughs] I don't know how much more I'm supposed to reveal! [Laughs] I'd say the scene that we shot earlier today, where we were hanging off of a train in the mountains. That was probably the

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=40253&t=Sebastian_Stan_Details_His_iCaptain_Americai_Filming_Experience_And_Much_More