

I just got back from one of the advanced previews we're having in the UK today. Let me cut the chase quick sharp and tell you my reaction when the movie ended... "That was effin' brilliant!" (I won't try to replicate the rather girlish giggle that came with it) Again, cutting to the chase before getting down to details, let me reassure you all - there are helmets and there is flying. It IS Thor, rest assured, not a watered down or "Hollywood-ised" version in the slightest. Branagh really has done wonders here. The film is entertaining, exciting, funny and emotionally engaging. All the performances are absolutely spot-on, every one of the cast pitch perfect in their respective roles, with Hemsworth not only holding his own in esteemed company, but totally convincing as the arrogant but likeable god of thunder. He IS Thor, every bit as much as Downey is Stark. The prospect

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/thor/news/?a=35886&t=Thor_Review_hopefully_as_spoiler_free_as_possible