

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=29340&t=Three_New_Candidates_For_iSuperman_iFemale_Lead_But_Not_As_Lois_Lane

It seems the plethora of rumored claimants for the "assumed" female lead, Lois Lane, in Zack Snyder's Superman reboot, may come to a halt with the ever-reliable Variety revealing not only three new actresses in the running, but also that the female lead may not be Lois Lane after all. While it still doesn't rule out that role, the site says: "Alice Eve, Diane Kruger and Rosamund Pike have emerged as the three thespians being considered for the character, whose identity hasn't been disclosed. Early reports had names such as Rachel McAdams and Kristen Stewart as female leads, but sources tell Variety that the studio doesn't want a name that could overshadow its leading man." You may remember British actress Alice Eve, who not only was a front-runner for Marvel's Captain America film, but was also attached to Fox's X-Men: First Class, before dropping out. Rosamund Pike has appeared in Die Another Day