After playing Spider-Man in three movies, the former Peter Parker still can't escape questions about the character despite being replaced by British actor Andrew Garfield in an upcoming reboot. However, he's far from bitter about this and told Access Hollywood at the Sundance Film Festival that he's looking forward to the movie when to share his thoughts on the new Marc Webb-directed movie with Andrew and Emma Stone. "I'm really excited. I think Marc Webb is an exciting filmmaker, and Andrew is a great actor. I've been a fan of his. I saw Boy A, which I loved, a bit ago... and, of course, The Social Network." "I'm a fan. I'm excited to see what they do." The currently untitled Spider-Man reboot is set to be released in 3D on July 3, 2012!
